

How did you experience the move online at your institution?

What worked unexpectedly well during the move online?

Videoconferencing

time management

Office hour meetings

Adaptation of the course curricula to the new medium

Technology literacy

Cross-national collaboration interactions with students

The link was kept between students and professors, even online

it was easier to collaborate by sharing documents and tools online and contributing together to developing docs

What worked unexpectedly well during the move online?

Connecting with students/ teachers from ALL over the world. All continents, literally!

Easier to get people together for a meeting - no travel time.

Teamwork

Teamwork
guest speakers - videoconference

time management

Negotiation simulations, even multilateral one

Teamwork

Organising big meetings with stakeholders from all over users and meeting all the deadlines we had.

Online classes and seminars worked well using the functionality of Zoom --breakout groups, chat, emojis.

What worked unexpectedly well during the move online?

Administration offices were responsive. Departments usually supported and understood our personal situation rather than only the cohort

Academic systems worked exceptionally well (submitting hw/ tests online, course information, interaction with profs)

Students presence was very high. And they reacted very well at the assignments

Discussion worked well online, because of the opportunity for chat comments. Good especially for students who are shy.

The teamwork across the entire institution, day and night, under high levels of stress but with high levels of energy.

I had more students online than live in the classroom, and there were no stage fright empathy

participating in many online conferences abroad

Having more people at the table than the usual suspects. More inclusive meetings possibly.

What worked unexpectedly well during the move online?

Meetings more efficient - less blah blah

Cheaper to attend classes

collaborative working

Everyone, also the senior staff, adapted very easy to the new reality... we where sacred in relation with their skills

time management

inter-campus collaboration

Students adapting to the technology sooner than expected
